Georgetown, Texas

Georgetown City Hall

Georgetown offers a fantastic opportunity for residents to savor a leisurely stroll along the picturesque San Gabriel River or indulge in a game of golf at one of its five local courses. For avid mountain bikers, the trails around Lake Georgetown beckon, guiding riders to the scenic fringes of the renowned Texas Hill Country. Additionally, the city's annual food and arts festivals, a plethora of independently owned restaurants, thrilling rodeo events, nearby wineries, and charming Victorian commercial architecture ensure that residents have a wealth of enticing attractions to explore right in their own backyard.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF GEORGETOWN

1848: Landowner, George Washington Glasscock, Sr. donated the land and was named Georgetown.

1873: Southwestern University was established as Texas' first university.

1878: A railroad was established, connecting Georgetown to nearby towns improving local trades.

1904: A railroad was established to Austin.

1921: Tragedy struck when a hurricane brought over 18" to the local area, causing the San Gabriel River to overflow. The town was flooded and destroying buildings and lives. A dam was built on the river to prevent future flooding. Lake Georgetown was created as a result.

1960: Neighboring city, Austin, experienced a large development increase, spreading the growth to Georgetown.

1960s - 2000s: Georgetown continued to see steady growth in population and economic development.

2015: The city made a switch to supply all of its power with wind and solar energy and became 100% green powered.
